

Babymoon Destinations That Are Both Romantic and Relaxing

Because Megan and Harry aren't the only ones expecting.

by Sara Holzman Mar 27, 2019

Congratulations! You're about to have a baby. But before your life is all sleepless nights and ceaseless diaper changes, we think you deserve to take a moment for yourself—because strange cravings, bloated feet, and crazy hormones are no easy feat to deal with. Cue the babymoon, a last romantic getaway, during which you and your partner get one more chance to do as you please as a family of two. Whether you want a stress-free beach trip or a peaceful dose of mother nature, these are the best spots to bond, pamper, and satisfy your cravings.

Chatham Bars Inn, Massachusetts

This quintessential New England retreat by the sea has a bit of everything, from tennis courts and golf courses to beach cabanas and a five-star spa. Plus, though the Cape may seem a summertime destination, Chatham Bars Inn is open year-round if you've got a spring or fall baby on the way and you want to avoid the summer crowds.

Cruise the bay on one of the Inn's boats, take a leisurely bike ride through town, and book a guided tour of Chatham Bar Inn's 8-acre farm. Spend your afternoons at the spa getting a mother of pearl massage, which uses organic oils to nourish the skin and can be tailored to individual mamas-to-be. Finish the day watching the sunset on an Adirondack chair then sipping on some non alcoholic bubbly at one of the Inn's idyllic seaside clambakes.
